DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US 6,551,266 to Davis, in view of US Pub. 2003/0154108 to Fletcher-Hayes et al. Davis discloses a therapeutic apheresis system, which is an extracorporeal blood treatment machine. The device includes a computerized data management system that includes a system for coordinating, managing, directing, entering, accessing, and analyzing all aspects of remote and local apheresis systems on the network. The device has a CPU and a storage device, as well as all the associated software required to manage and control the system over an Internet platform (see columns 19-21). With that disclosure,

Art Unit: 3762

Davis indicates that the system incorporates all software and hardware required to establish and maintain an Internet connection. Using the Internet as a communication tool is an obvious solution to communications problems, since the Internet provides a common language that various machines on a network can use to communicate with one another, as taught by Fletcher-Hayes see paragraphs 0204-0206). The communication system used in Fletcher-Hayes' extracorporeal blood treatment system specifically discloses a web interface that allows communication between a computer/database system and various other computer systems. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to provide the extracorporeal treatment device and computerized data management system disclosed by Davis with the internet communications software disclosed by Fletcher-Hayes in order to provide a means of communication that can be decoded by various machines on the network, as taught by Hayes. Furthermore, it would have been obvious to combine the communications hardware and software in an integrated unit, since it has been held that forming in one piece an article which has formerly been formed in two pieces and put together involves only routine skill in the art. See MPEP 2144.04.

With regard to claims 2-7 regarding the operation of the ECB station and communication system, it has been held that a recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus satisfying the claimed structural limitations. As such, the processes claimed by applicant do not add patentable weight to the independent claim.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:
